You can read my Blog Article and check out a list of over 20 Safelists I use personally.

4) How to avoid Hacking

There are seven ways to minimize your chances of getting hacked:

a)

Use Secure File Transfer Protocol (SFTP) instead of FTP. Normally, this requires SSH access. The downside is that (from what I know) most web hosting companies don't provide SSH access to their shared hosting customers! If you are on a VPS or Dedicated server, you should already have SSH access.

b)

Use strong passwords. I use the Roboform password generating tool for this purpose! Usually its default settings work me, but if you need stronger passwords than what the tool offers by default, you can always customize the available options!

c)

Keep your PC protected with Firewalls, Antivirus tools, Malware Detectors, Anti-Spyware Tools, etc. If you are looking for recommendations, this is a good forum to get started.

Please remember: different security tools work and behave differently on different systems, so it might take a few months of trial and error before you find the "perfect" solution for your application. And also very important, update these security tools regularly!

d)

Always download software programs from trusted sources, such as Cnet or Tucows.

e)

As soon as you have downloaded a file, scan it with an antivirus tool to make sure it is not infected, especially if it happens to be an executable program!

f)

Stay away from bad sites. If you visit sites that host porn, warez, keygen, etc., you cannot blame anyone but yourself in case you get infected with Trojans and Viruses!

Successful Ebay Trading

g)

Avoid downloading files from Peer-to-Peer (P2P) connections: With most P2P networks, the uploaded content is hardly monitored, so your chances downloading a Trojan are very high. Another possibility is that of identity theft. You may be happily downloading some stuff using Limewire, while a couple of thieves are busy stealing your IP address, passwords, or other secret information they can use to harm you in future! Remote attacks are also a possibility!

Please keep in mind that even if you follow these seven steps, there is no guarantee that you would be totally protected from FTP password thieves! However, these security measures would certainly minimize the chances of attacks!
